

Call for proposals

All junior researchers (master and PhD-students, as well as graduates who have received their doctorate within the last two years) can apply to participate in the 15th JURE Conference. If you want to participate, please consult this section along with the submissions section and send a proposal by December 14th 2011. JURE (JUnior REsearchers) is a network of EARLI dedicated to the interests of all junior researchers in the field of learning and instruction; to find out more about EARLI's research topics follow this link. Please visit the JURE website <http://www.earli-jure2012.org/> for more details and information about keynote speakers, the variety of workshops and the venue.

The review process has two phases; please see the submission and important dates sections for details.

Proposals

Proposals should consist of an abstract (300 words at maximum) and an extended summary (1000 words at maximum, including references). Your proposal may be accepted, offered an alternative presentation format, or rejected. The decision will be e-mailed to you by January 31, 2012.

To ensure that we can accept as many proposals as possible we want to encourage you to choose the most appropriate format for the phase of your research. People who choose the right format will have a higher chance of being accepted than proposals for which we have to offer an alternative format. With this in mind, please consider the following guidelines:

Applying for a paper presentation is only possible if you have a finished literature study or empirical study. This means that you have to show in your proposal that you already are in the stage of interpreting your data. Papers will not be published on this website. Furthermore, you have to be sure that you will be able to write a full paper by March 28th, 2012. During the presentation the focus will be on presenting your results and there is time for a short discussion. For research in progress a poster presentation or a round table discussion is a suitable format. During a round table discussion you will have the chance for an in-depth discussion of your results, the design of your research project or research in progress. Posters similarly allow you to present 'work in progress'.

The JURE organizing committee along with an independent reviewer will evaluate your proposal according to the proposal review criteria.

Note: It is possible to submit two proposals on different topics for different presentation formats. When both proposals meet the standards for acceptance, we will offer you to present the highest valued proposal. Only when we have space left in our schedule for extra presentations will we offer you the option to present both proposals. In order to submit two proposals you will have to go through the online submission system twice.

Actively Take Part in the Peer Feedback Process

As a participant of the 15th JURE Conference you are expected to take part in the feedback procedure and to comment on one paper, poster or round table handout of another conference participant. This will take place after the second phase of submission (March 28th, 2012).

You are requested to send back your feedback by May 31st, 2012.
Detailed information about the feedback process will follow soon.
